

From the Mouth of God

Lesson Thirteen

- 1. How many years separate the writings of the Old and New Testaments? How does the author suggest that things changed dramatically during this intervening period?
- 2. In what way does New Testament literature parallel Old Testament literature?
- 3. What does Ferguson argue is the most basic (and yet often neglected) principle in reading the gospels?
- 4. What four things should we be able to tell others after having read the gospels?

5. What particular points does the author make about Matthew's gospel that can help us understand its basic framework?

6. In the space provided, explain the significance of the following hallmarks of Jesus' ministry:

- Parables

- Allegory

- Miracles
